the audience when they are taken out of their comfort zone, these little puppies are so much fun because they add a ton of color and can create a marvelous visual palate to an author's writing. Similes and metaphors are comparisons of one thing to another. Similes usually have "like" in the sentence, while metaphors contain "is" in the sentence. Similes are direct comparisons, whereas metaphors make a more direct connection without using "as" or "like". For example, "as cold as a dog's nose" is a simile, and "boy overboard" is a metaphor.

The novel "Tomorrow When the War Began" by John Marsden explores the physical and emotional journey that can be very unfamiliar to the audience when they are taken out of their comfort zone. This journey is represented through characters and events. "Runaway Love" is a story about love, "Never Let You Go" about love, and "Overboard" about love.

The novel "Boy Overboard" by Morris Gleitzman is a good book. It's not my favorite, but it's quite good. It probably is the best refugee book for school years 5 to 7. All in all, the book was okay. The funniest part was when Jamal got kicked on the leg by the pirate because he took the ball away from the teacher.

Many themes are explored in the novel, and one of them is the "overboard" saying. This saying is used to describe something that is bold, wild, dangerous, and crazy. Jamal's decision to go "overboard" stems from his experiences growing up in a war-torn land.

Similes and metaphors are a common technique that authors use to describe things in "Boy Overboard". Bibi had so much courage to come out without a burqa and without a male chaperone just to play an illegal sport. I mean, I don't even leave the classroom without telling the teacher. Exploring themes in "Boy Overboard" can be very insightful. The book uses the saying about going "overboard" to mean going beyond what is considered normal or acceptable.
