By August Wilson Directed By Seret Scott

August Wilson was born Frederick August Kittel on April 27, 1945 to Daisy Wilson and Fred Erick Kittel, a white baker who had emigrated from Germany to Pittsburgh. The fourth of Daisy Wilson’s six children, he changed his name to August Wilson after his father’s death in 1965. The family lived in the Hill, the Pittsburgh neighborhood where he grew up. Wilson was a natural storyteller, and he wrote his first play at the age of 12. He went on to attend Boston University, where he studied playwriting. After graduation, he worked as a journalist and teacher before becoming a full-time playwright.

Wilson’s plays are known for their deep characterizations and their exploration of the African American experience. His most famous work is “Fences,” a play about a man named Troy Maxson who is stuck in a dead-end job and dreams of a better life. The play was first performed in 1987 and has been produced in many countries since then. It was also made into a film in 2010.

Wilson died of pancreatic cancer on October 2, 2005. He was 60 years old. His legacy lives on through his plays, which continue to be performed around the world. His plays are considered some of the best works of American theater.
